GIANT KILLERS 'SONGS FOR THE SMALL PLACES'

Album Released: 26th January 2024

Giant Killers finally release their debut album on 26th January nearly three decades on from when they recorded it! The album 'Songs For The Small Places' will be released digitally across all platforms on Little Genius Recordings. At least £2 of every sale through Bandcamp will go to the suicide prevention charity Campaign Against Living Miserably.

The indie-pop band are song writing duo Jamie Wortley (guitar, keys, lead vocals) and Michael Brown (bass, keys, brass, vocals). They were signed to MCA Records in 1995 where they released two singles, however the album never saw the light of day. Now the band have their rights back and the album can finally have its chance to shine!

The 90s sound remains a massive influence on the present-day music scene and their melodic songs with gritty lyrics and guitar sounds layered with old school synth riffs will resonate with music fans of all generations.

"Giant Killers have the ability to capture moods and moments while evoking emotions running the gamut from regret and loss through to optimism and love. They have the raconteur's knack of painting pictures in the mind of the listener which are no less vivid for all the intervening years since the words were first written.

"With Songs For The Small Places, Giant Killers are doing their bit to make all of our lives a little happier, and whether or not they ever achieve long-overdue commercial recognition, they have certainly earned their fifteen minutes of fame second time around."

Louder Than War, February 2024

QUOTE FROM BAND

What we're hopeful for, after a long journey to bring them into the light, is that these songs will finally reach the ears of the discerning listener and be given a fair chance to be loved, or otherwise, on their artistic and creative merit. We believe that Songs for the Small Places is a work about universal and timeless themes. Our 3 decades long wish is to see if the rest of the world agrees with us.

The band opened for Blur on their Country House tour and toured with Dr Robert (Blow Monkeys) and Nick Heyward. They appeared on C4's The Big Breakfast and performed live on the Patrick Kielty Show.

Separately and together, Giant Killers have remained jobbing and gigging musicians and in other musical projects, playing at Glastonbury twice and Proms in the Park in Hyde Park opening for Lionel Richie; they've toured with Squeeze and supported Motown legend Edwin Starr.
